TREASURY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN DIPLOMAT DEAD.

Special Cable to The Washington Herald. Tokyo, July 2.—H. W. Denison, Amer-can legal adviser to the Japanese foreign office, died today in St. Luke's Hosnital aged sixty-eight. He suffered a stroke of paralysis a week ago. At the time he was stricken Mr. Dennison was engaged in diplomatic work relative to Japan's protests against the anti-alien land law

The condolences of the President and the American government were tele-graphed yesterday to the Emperor of Japan upon the death in Tokyo of Henry

Willard Denison, an American, who has served the Japanese government in the capacity of adviser to the foreign office for thirty-four years. In the dispatch President Wilson declared that Denison had "done honor to his own country in his service to Japan."

ONE STABBED: OTHER JAILED.

His face slashed almost into ribbons and his neck severely cut, Oscar Oliver, forty-one years old, of 812 K street south-east, is at Casualty Hospital in a critical

indition, as the result of an altercation last night at Eleventh and M streets southeast with William Harper, colored, of 411-2 L street southeast. Harper is held at the Fifth precinct station.

DAILY SHORT STORY.

THE PINK BOMB. By CLARISSA MACKIE.

(Copyright, 1914.)
Bod Loring, stretched in the hammock, sniffed the smoke-laden air with pleas-antly vivid recollections of his boyhood. "The very smell of powder is tantaliz-ing," he muttered. "If I was a kid again I'd be shooting off crackers and cannons and-well. I wouldn't be eating my glimpse of Amy Deering's white frock as sought the comparative seclusion of the little pine grove. Amy was timid concerning firecrackers and her small nephew was recklessly tossing the sputtering red crackers dangerously near her seat under the trees.

Teddy came worfully up to Bob's ham-mock. In one chubby hand was a bit of glowing punk; in the other he carried a box of firecrackers. "What's the matter, kid?" asked Bol

"Well, you stay here and I'll help you "Well, you stay here and I'll help you shoot them off," said Bob cheerfully. "There's no fun in spending Fourth of July alone." He swung his feet to the ground and made room for the delighted child beside him. "Let's fire off these little fellows first," he advised with a thought for Mrs. Bank's aching head.
"She acts mad at me," grumbled Teddy as he blew on the ronk stick.

Bob sank back in the hammock.
"Silly" he groaned. "It's the crowning act of an asinine career."
Perhaps Bob Loring was rather severe on himself; but he was hopelessly in love on himself; but he was hopelessly in love with Amy, and lately the girl had grown so cold and distant that only a persistent lover would have faced her aloofness and accepted the Banks' invitation for the Fourth of July. Bob was continually planning for an opportunity to tell Amy about his love and invariably she evaded his manifest declaration.

Today was a fair sample. Here was he glooming alone in the hammock; there in the pine grove was Amy—Teddy in the pine grove was Amy-Teddy had said she was in tears! Was there another lover? Bob's heart jumped un-pleasantly at the very idea of a rival.
